

Huskers Storm Manhattan

Manhattan, Kan. — By the time 3:55 remained in the first quarter of the Nebraska-Kansas State football game, Cornhusker quarterback Turner Gill and tight end Jamie Williams had hooked up for a pair of touchdown passes in windswept KSU Stadium.

But it really didn't take that long for most of a crowd of 44,915, the second-largest in Kansas State history, to realize the competitive disparity between the two teams, a disparity underscored by 14th-ranked Nebraska's 49-3 Big Eight Conference victory.

Before the afternoon was finished, NU I-back Mike Rozler, who gained 153 yards in 19 carries, had come within one yard of tying the school record for a touchdown run from scrimmage, bolting 93 yards to score early in the second quarter.

Sophomore Irving Fryar scored two touchdowns, one on a 49-yard pass play from Mark Mauer and the other on a pitchout from Mauer; and Mark Moravec and Bruce Mathison each scored one touchdown apiece on short runs.

Place kicker Kevin Seibel extended his school-record string of successful extra-point kicks to 56, and Nebraska's defense extended a string of consecutive scoreless quarters to nine before Kansas State got on the board with a 33-yard field goal.

The Cornhuskers now have allowed only two field goals in their last three games. Nebraska is the only Big Eight team now undefeated and untied in conference play.

Turner Gill has protection galore and time to see his tight end on this pass, which (see next photo)....

....is hauled in by Jamie Williams for a Nebraska touchdown in the first quarter.

The Nebraska defense is all over this Kansas State ball carrier, with safety Jeff Krejci (2) making final contact.

Jimmy Williams (96) leaves his feet and so does KSU quarterback Darrell Dickey as the Husker All-American gets the sack.

Roger Craig (21) uses his speed to get outside against the Wildcats as the Omaha junior continues to lead his mates in rushing.

Reserve fullback Doug Wilkening gives great effort in trying to break this Wildcat tackle, while Dan Hurley (73) blocks in front.

Lockerroom Chatter

The Huskers

Tom Osborne, head coach — "We played fairly well, overall. We executed well in the first half. There were times when they knocked us off the ball a bit. They ran on us better than we wanted to see. I was disappointed that we couldn't score early in the third quarter. (Turner) Gill played well, and our secondary did a good job. They didn't give up the big play. The wind was a factor for both teams in the second half, but we controlled the ball at that time."

Steve Damkroger, linebacker — "I was happy with how we played defensively, but the coaches weren't. They said we were giving up too many four and eight-yard plays. But they (the Wildcats) didn't have the ball that much. We're coming to play better as a team, more and more, and things are starting to come together better since the Iowa and Penn State games."

Jamie Williams, tight end — "Kansas State dropped an end like a robber. Turner (Gill) did a good job of reading it and throwing over the guy. As tall as I am, he knew I could jump up and over to get it. Turner's great about getting the ball to you."

Jimmy Williams, defensive end — "After we scored our first three touchdowns, I think they gave up. You could tell by the intensity of their offensive linemen. We wanted to be pretty physical and control the line of scrimmage."

Dan Hurley, offensive tackle — "Turner Gill sits back in that pocket like those pro quarterbacks. Our line is designated to block inside-out. Turner is great sitting in there and handling the pressure. He lets his linemen adjust. Most young quarterbacks would roll out. That takes a tremendous poise for him to stay in there and let us do what we're supposed to do."

The Wildcats

Jim Dickey, head coach — "I said before the game that Nebraska is a great team, and I haven't changed my view. We played many young players who are not yet ready to play at this level. Our program totally is based on developing, but that doesn't take anything away from Nebraska. They always have awesome offensive and defensive lines, and their backs look like Oklahoma backs. I didn't used to think they had great backs, but those guys can run."

Greg Pemberton, offensive guard — "They (the Cornhuskers) are tough coming off the ball. They are big and pretty fast. I don't think they are that much tougher than anyone else we played. They just did everything right."

Rick Manning, flanker — "Nebraska had lots of man-to-man defense. That's why we ran the motion offense. Their coverage seemed to work well. We hit them up the middle early, but they closed it and forced us outside. Their secondary coverage is excellent."

Darrell Dickey, quarterback — "It's tough to compare Nebraska to Missouri because they both do lots of things well. We moved the ball on the ground against Nebraska, but they minimized the things we could do."

Injury Report

Tight end Jamie Williams is questionable for this week's game with Missouri after stretching a ligament in his left knee. According to NU assistant trainer and physical therapist Jerry Weber, Williams' status is a "day-to-day thing."

Fullback Phil Bates is Nebraska's other major concern. Bates bruised his left shoulder against Colorado. That injury, which kept him out of practice two days last week, was aggravated in the Kansas State game.

The other injuries in Saturday's game were expected to heal and not cause players to be lost for Missouri. Cornerback Allen Lyday has a sore knee. Offensive tackle Randy Theiss twisted an ankle; center Brad Johnson strained a knee; and I-back Roger Craig bruised his left knee.

The Way We See It...

John Rooney

Missouri Network, Inc.
Jefferson, Mo.

"Not to take anything away from Tony Bruns, but Missouri needs All-American center Brad Edelman back in the lineup. He's the only senior in the offensive line and he makes a big difference. Mike Hyde is a better quarterback than he showed at Iowa State. Before the game, I had a feeling that passing could make it lopsided. I just thought it would be Missouri, not Iowa State. For Nebraska, motivation is no problem. With Missouri's coaches predominantly from Nebraska, they get up automatically. Missouri 17, Nebraska 14."

Bill Wilkerson

KMOX Radio, St. Louis

"All season, in the back of my mind, I've wondered how Missouri's young secondary would react when it faced a real passing team. Against Iowa State, they were confused under the gun because they didn't expect it. Missouri's defense is excellent against the run, but is still trying to find itself against the pass. Missouri did not get one sack against Iowa State, or even come close to getting one. It'll be interesting to see if Nebraska gives Turner Gill that kind of protection. The whole key is how well Missouri's secondary covers Nebraska's receivers. I don't think Missouri's offense will have any problem moving the ball. This could be one of those Missouri-Nebraska games where the scoreboard runs out of numbers. Neither team may not stop the other one. I'll pick a score of 31-24. But the winner is whichever team has the ball last."

Randy York

Lincoln Journal and Star

"Round Five in the Tom Osborne-Warren Powers fight goes to the team with the most guns — Nebraska. Missouri has been impressive, but overrated. Nebraska has been impressive, and underrated. The Huskers are Top 10 material. The Tigers may be Top 20 material....if they can make this showdown more competitive than the Ames' disaster. Nebraska 27, Missouri 17."

Dan Kelly

KMOX Radio, St. Louis

"After playing poorly against Iowa State, I think Missouri will bounce back and be a lot hungrier team. Because of both teams' defenses, I don't see this Missouri-Nebraska game being as high scoring as those in the past. Of all the sports I cover — the St. Louis Blues hockey, the football and baseball Cardinals — college football is the hardest to put your finger on. You can't get a reading, not even after the Iowa State game. Missouri was keyed to stop Dwayne Crutchfield and Donnie Duncan came out throwing. Iowa State's offensive line did a heckuva job. Missouri's defense had been tremendous, but they were surprised by how often Iowa State threw the ball and when they threw it. It's flip-a-coin time. Missouri 17, Nebraska 14."

Rich Sambol

Kansas City Star

"Having watched Nebraska's game against Florida State, I could see the quarterback problem coming. Tom Osborne said he'd spend sleepless nights, worrying about it. I hate to say it because it won't sound right, but Nate Mason's injury may have been a blessing in disguise. It meant Osborne had one less possibility with which to concern himself. Turner Gill has come on and helped Nebraska find itself. The Huskers are making up for lost time. The proof of the pudding now is for Gill to show his ability against a better team than Colorado and Kansas State. I think he will. If Missouri doesn't get a rush on him, the Tigers are in trouble. It won't be easy, but I'll say Nebraska 28, Missouri 14."

Wally Provost

Omaha World-Herald

"Missouri handed Bob Devaney his first defeat as Nebraska coach and did the same thing for Tom Osborne. Now, Osborne is 4-4 with Missouri, but three of his wins have come at Columbia. Does Nebraska have a stranger rivalry? I never learned how to predict scores. My prediction is that Nebraska probably will win by just enough points to kill off a few more heart patients."

Joe Patrick

WOW-TV, Omaha

"If Iowa State scored 34 points on Missouri, Nebraska should score 38. I've been in love with this Nebraska team all season. Secretly, I think even Tom Osborne thought this was his best team. It's unfortunate the Huskers are saddled with two losses, but I'm stuck on this team, even if they lose a couple more games. And I don't think they will. Steve Runty, our color man, knows a good quarterback and he thinks Turner Gill is the best he's ever seen. An off day for Gill would be a good day for anyone else. Gill has the talent, the smarts and the poise and the durability. He's not even slow getting up off the stack. I think Nebraska helped itself with a tough early schedule. If the Huskers were wondering before, they believe in themselves now. Nebraska 38, Missouri 17."

Don Gill

KLIN, Lincoln

"Although Tom Osborne says he'd like to play a team that has just won rather than lost, I think Missouri's loss to Iowa State will undermine some of the confidence built from the Tigers' first five victories. To me, Nebraska now appears to be the team that's for real, rather than Missouri. It's hard to go against a team that can run, pass and play great defense like Nebraska can. Make it Nebraska 28, Missouri 14."

The Huskers Say....

"At this stage of the season, Nebraska may have the most complete college football team in the country. The Cornhuskers have a great offensive line, great running backs, great receivers and a quarterback who will earn the ultimate accolade against Missouri. Defensively, the Huskers have a great interior, great defensive ends, great linebackers and a great secondary. It all adds up to a great football team. Nebraska 34, Missouri 13."

Coach Osborne's Evaluation

Tom Osborne has said it before — he'd rather play a team coming off a win than a loss. But in the case of Saturday's regionally televised Big Eight Conference game at Missouri, Nebraska's head football coach sees little difference.

"I'm sure Missouri will play hard no matter what," Osborne said of the Tigers, who are coming off a 34-13 loss at Iowa State that ended their unbeaten season and dropped them out of the Top 10.

"Both are good teams," Osborne said. "Anyone who follows college football knows that Iowa State is not necessarily a better team than Missouri. They were just better that day."

Osborne used last Saturday's Texas-Arkansas game as an example. "It's hard to foresee how Texas can beat Oklahoma by three touchdowns one week, then lose to Arkansas by five touchdowns the next week," he said.

It's trite, but true. "Football is such an emotional game," Osborne said. "It's such a game of momentum and turnovers. If we'd been playing a real good football team instead of Kansas State, we might have been in trouble with our turnovers."

Osborne thought turnovers were a major part of Missouri's undoing.

Although Nebraska coasted to a 49-3 victory over the Wildcats, Osborne said the game took a physical toll on the Cornhuskers.

"We're a little beat up," he said. "K-State hit us awfully hard. They really went after us. It seems like we always get pounded around down there a lot. It wasn't like Colorado."

Osborne is happy that his Cornhuskers are the only unbeaten, untied team in the Big Eight standings. "But I don't think it means much right now," he admitted. "I'm not saying we've played the two weakest teams in the conference, but we've played two of the weaker ones. Any great optimism at this point is unfounded."

Osborne said Nebraska will face "an excellent defense" in Missouri, "particularly up front and with the linebackers. That's not saying their secondary is bad, though."

The Tigers "seem to be moving the ball more in the air than on the ground, although they can run," Osborne pointed out.

Even though Iowa State used the pass as its major weapon to beat Missouri, Osborne said he has "no preconceived ideas" about emphasizing the Huskers' passing attack for the Tigers.

"We like to have balance," Osborne said. "Even if we were getting ready to play a team that led the nation in pass defense, we'd like to think we could still pass against them."

Passing was something the Huskers did better talking about than they did on the field through the early season. Until Turner Gill took over the starting quarterback job two weeks ago the Nebraska quarterbacks had combined to complete only 26 of 63 attempts for but 304 yards. Then Gill, the rapidly improving sophomore from Fort Worth, took over the controls against Colorado and Kansas State, games the Huskers won by a combined margin of 108-3. With Gill hitting 21 of 35 on the season for 344 yards and six touchdowns, the NU aerial stats now look much more like those Big Red fans are accustomed to seeing (48 for 98 for 705 yards).

The Nebraska running game is also as well-balanced as it's ever been. Roger Craig still leads with 674 yards total and a 6.2 average per carry, but Mike Rozier, with his big day last Saturday, is up to 460 yards and a 6.5 average. Fullback Phil Bates is averaging 6.1 per crack, with seven other Nebraska ball carriers topping 6.0 per carry.

Missouri's success had been suspect until the Tigers went to Mississippi State (a game that originally was supposed to be Penn State, the last team to defeat NU) and dominated the Bulldogs completely. That proud Tiger defense was torn to shreds by Iowa State, which had relied almost totally on the running of tailback Dwayne Crutchfield until a 52-31 loss at San Diego State three weeks ago.

In that loss the Cyclones discovered quarterback John Quinn could throw the football. Quinn blistered Missouri for 226 passing yards, hitting 20 of 32 tosses with only one interception. With the pressure taken off Crutchfield, the big senior was able to rush for three touchdowns and 98 yards.

The Tigers, who have been one of NU's toughest Big Eight tests in recent years, were supposed to be down this year after losing quarterback Phil Bradley, tailback James Wilder and several other key members of a team that challenged for the league title the last three years.

But John Hyde has moved in at quarterback to direct a steady, productive offense in six games. Even in the loss at Ames, Missouri rushed for 129 yards and passed for 141 more. Two lost fumbles and three interceptions, however, enabled ISU to snap the five-game winning streak of coach Warren Powers, a former Nebraska assistant.

The Cornhusker defense has now gone through 12 quarters without giving up a touchdown. Not since Penn State scored late to secure a 30-24 win at Lincoln has NU seen its goal line crossed. Auburn (17-3) and K-State each managed a field goal.

Missouri bombed Kansas State 58-13 the same week that Nebraska was blanking Colorado, 59-0. So the Tigers have shown the ability to put points on the board. And, up until the collapse at Ames, the MU defense seemed as good as ever.

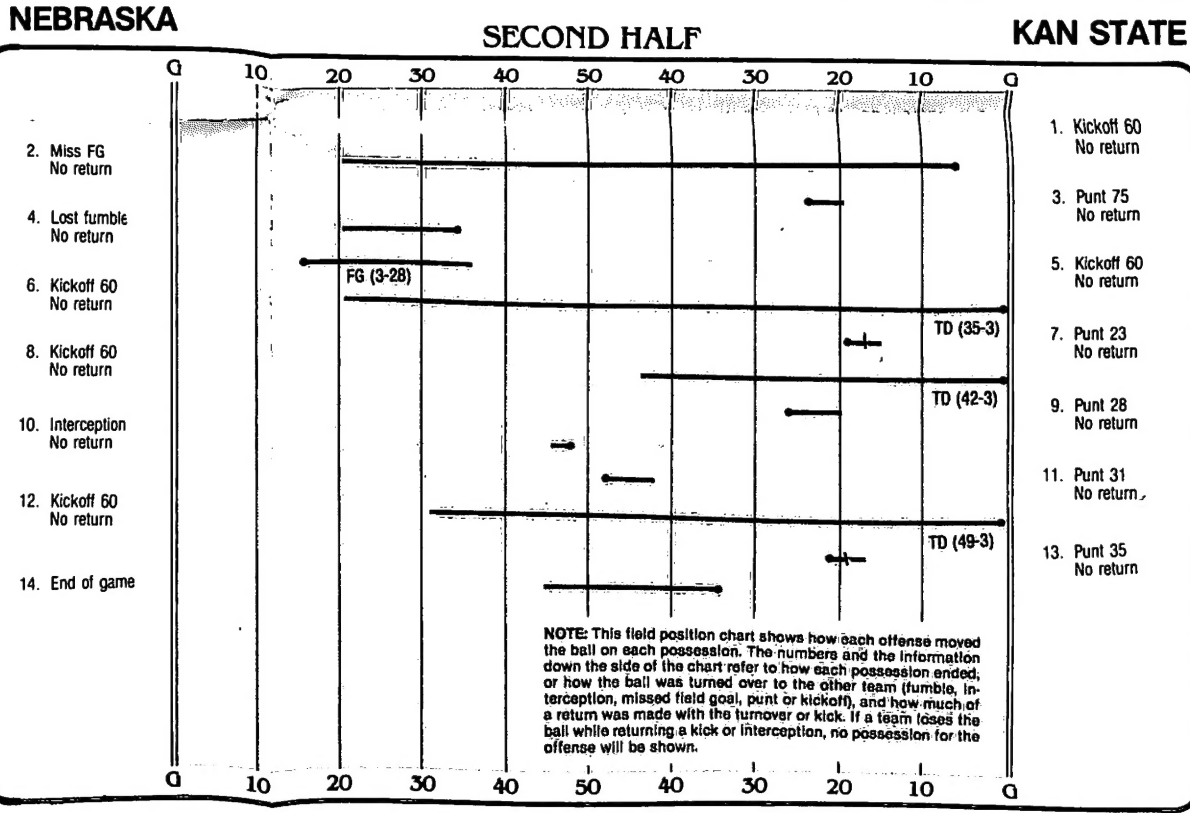

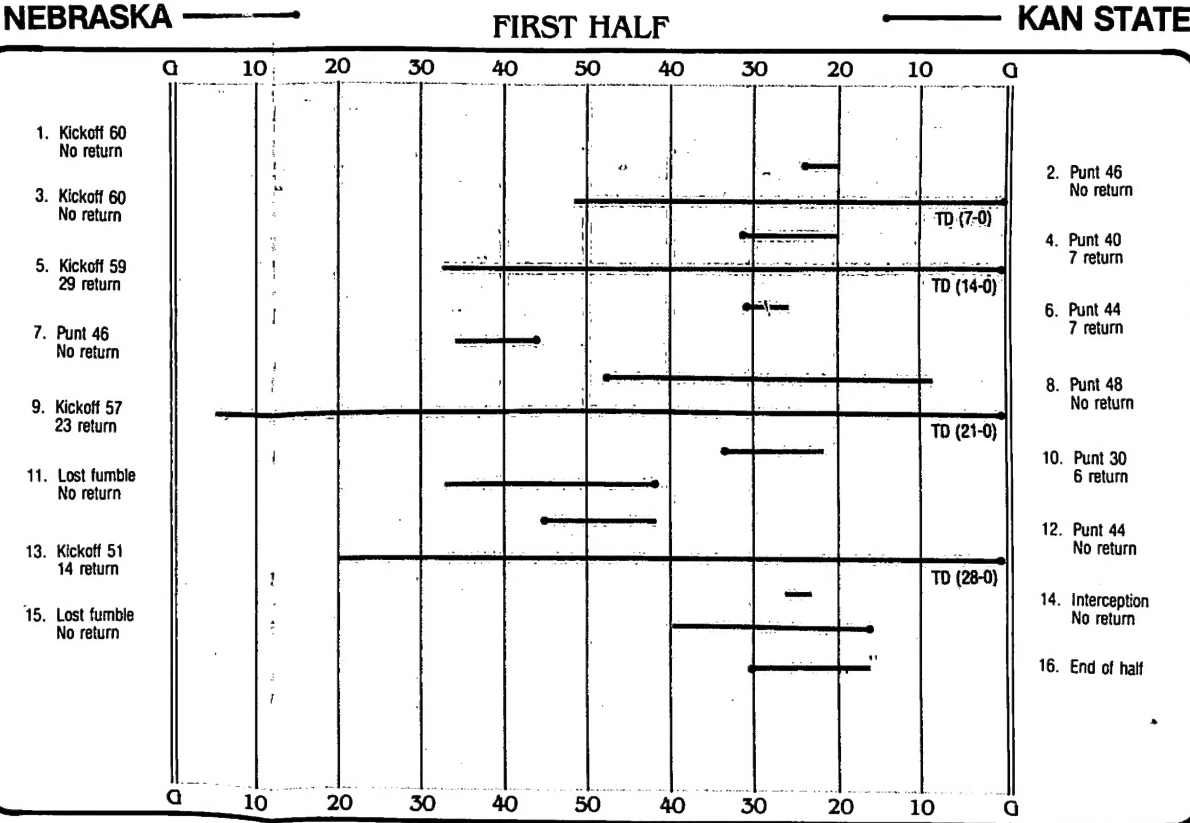

Going into the Iowa State game Mizzou's defense had yielded only 2.0 yards per play on the ground, and but 79.4 a game. They held Crutchfield to less than 100 yards for the first time this season.

Conversely, Missouri runners have averaged only 2.9 yards per carry, with the top regular through those first five victories holding only a 3.9 average per try (Bobby Meyer with 254 yards in 65 carries). Tracey Mack and George Shorthose are the two youngsters who carry the Tiger hopes on their shoulders for game-breaking runs.

The Bengal offense, of course, has two of the Big Eight's best in tight end Andy Gibling and center Brad Edelman. But Nebraska fans feel they have the match for both in Jamie Williams and Dave Rimington. That battle of individuals Saturday could end up being as interesting as the game itself.

When Hyde goes for the big gain, it's not been Gibling, however. The Tigers' James Caver and Craig White have averaged nearly 20 yards per catch and are threats to go the distance any time they make the grab.
